The lecture series will cover both Romantic and Victorian literature. During the 19th century, Britain saw an enormous increase of wealth and power, territorial expansion, technological innovations, industrialisation, scientific progress, political and social reforms. At the same time, it was an age of fundamental crises of faith and norms and political discontent: The impact of the American and French Revolution resonates in many Romantic texts, and later Darwin's theory of evolution and other scientific discoveries called religion into question. Towards the end of the century gender norms were seriously contested and the belief in the empire and the ideology of progress began to erode. The lecture series will attempt at covering these conflicts, tensions, and paradoxes, as they are manifest in poetry, novels, essays, scientific discourses, drama and art.

Readings: It is recommended to purchase the volumes Romanticism by Duncan Wu (Blackwell) and The Victorian Age (Norton Anthology) for poetry and shorter prose pieces. Novels: Joseph Conrad, Heart of Darkness; Charles Dickens, Great Expectations; Charlotte Brontë, Jane Eyre; George Eliot, Middlemarch; Thomas Hardy, Tess of the D'Urbervilles; Mary Shelley: Frankenstein; R.L. Stevenson, The Strange Case of Dr Jekyll and Mr Hyde, Plays: Oscar Wilde, The Importance of Being Earnest.

Background reading: Christopher Harvie and H.C.G. Matthew, Nineteenth-Century Britain: A Very Short Introduction (Oxford 2000) and the chapters on Victorian Novelists in Terry Eagleton, The English Novel (London 2005).

Registration: via StudIP until 1. November.

Kommentar	The development of the English Novel in the nineteenth century was for a great part shaped by women writers in terms of style, contents and form. Looking at works by four canonical British women writers who have all explored the precarious social position of women of their time but have found very different ways of telling a story, this course will explore what Terry Eagleton has called "the most hybrid of literary forms". With the exception of Middlemarch, we will, however, not read the most famous of their novels - no Pride & Prejudice, no Jane Eyre - but those novels which often undeservedly remain in the shadows of the more popular works. In order to set the ground for informed discussions, it is obligatory to read all novels before term starts. Reading: Jane Austen, Sense and Sensibility (Norton Critical Edition); Anne Brontë, Agnes Grey (Penguin Classics); Charlotte Brontë, Villette (Penguin Classics); George Eliot, Middlemarch (Norton Critical Edition). Registration: via StudIP until 7. Kommentar This is the first in a series of four lecture courses offered consecutively over a period of two years. It is designed to acquaint students with the literature and culture of North America from the late sixteenth- through the early nineteenth-centuries, i.e. the period of exploration and settlement, the American Revolution, the Early Republic, and the Age of Jackson. We will discuss some of the exemplary texts from these periods, analyzing their characteristic forms and themes as well as the history of their interpretation. Specific attention will be paid to key literary concepts, debates, and interpretive methodologies. We will also discuss important issues such as the role of religion in American culture and the separation of church and state; the theory and practice of federalism; enlightenment notions of commerce; slavery; western expansion; and the wars waged against Native American tribes. We will read examples of the sermon, epic, mock epic, occasional poetry; philosophical, religious, revolutionary, and anti-slavery tracts; travel narratives, captivity narratives, pamphlets, broadsides, dramas, speeches, letters; excerpts from early novels; and we will discuss contacts and exchanges between native and colonial cultures and the translation/transcription of traditionally oral tales. Students should walk away from this course with a deeper understanding of the various cultural traditions and innovations that helped lead to new nationhood, and with knowledge of the first literature to self-consciously call itself American.

Registration: Attendance for this class is limited to 200 students. Binding (!) registration on Stud.IP between 01 September and 10 November is required. All news concerning this class will be posted on Stud.IP as well. The class will start in the first week of the semester. For final registration, participants need to attend the first session of class.

Kommentar

The argument that presidential communication has an impact on the nature, scope, and influence of the presidency as institution is far from new (see e.g. Tulis 1987). Yet, given the current administration's use of instant communication and its often remediated feuds with both the legislative and the mass media, a point can be made for a new shift in the contouring of the presidency. In order to fully assess the resulting instable relationship between governmental institutions and the general public on the level of both discourse and practice, we will take a look at the development of presidential rhetoric since its very inception. We will discuss the unique rhetoric of a number of Presidents, among them Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln, F.D. Roosevelt, George W. Bush, Obama, and Trump. We will address different genres of presidential discourse (e.g. the State of the Union and the Inaugural Address), presidents' responses to crises (e.g. impending war and terrorism, economic recession, etc.), and the addressees of presidential speeches (e.g. Congress, the American public, etc.) while paying particular attention to questions of style, structure, framing, and performance.

Texts and Requirements: Texts will be made available on Stud.IP.

Registration: Attendance for this class is limited to 35 students. Binding (!) registration on Stud.IP between 01 September and 01 October 2017 is required. All news concerning this class will be posted on Stud.IP as well. The class will start in the first week of the semester. For final registration, participants need to attend the first session of class.

B.AS.301.2: Introducing Critical Theory II

Kommentar

The two-semester lecture series aims at introducing students to major approaches, traditions, and key figures in the fields of cultural and media theory. The second part of the lecture series, "Approaches and Methods in Media Studies," will focus on media theory, visual culture, material culture and cultural studies. The lecture will be concerned with media history, the relation between (mass) media and society, media aesthetics, models of communication, and questions of cultural memory, technology, materiality and embodiment. Other relevant issues are medial configurations of time and space, networks and systems, concepts of hyperreality, postmodernity and the digital. We will also consider theories of single media: photography, the cinema, television, the computer and mobile media.

The lecture will introduce a number of key texts and major schools that have been influential in the development of critical media and cultural studies: The Toronto School, the Frankfurt School, German media theory, British Cultural Studies, theories of postmodernism and visual culture, film and television theory, theories of material culture, systems theory, and actor-network theory.

Key thinkers are Theodor W. Adorno, Walter Benjamin, Jean Baudrillard, Bill Brown, James Carey, Richard Dyer, John Fiske, Stuart Hall, Mark Hansen, Miriam Hansen, Donna Haraway, Katherine Hayles, Max Horkheimer, Harold Innis, Frederic Jameson, Friedrich Kittler, Bruno Latour, Marshall McLuhan, Jason Mittell, Laura Mulvey, John Durham Peters, Claude Shannon, Raymond Williams, and Geoffrey Winthrop-Young.

Individual lectures are concerned with selected key thinkers and texts; the latter will be provided on Stud.IP.

Registration: Attendance for this class is limited to 40 students. Binding (!) registration on Stud.IP between 01 September and 01 October 2017 is required. All news concerning this class will be posted on Stud.IP. The class will start in the first week of the semester. For final registration, participants need to attend the first session of class.

This - voluntary but highly recommended - tutorial is taught in conjunction with the class "Introducing Critical Theory II" (modules: B.AS.04; B.AS.301; M.EP.01b; M.EP01b-L). The tutorial provides an opportunity to discuss the texts covered in the course, to address questions and to support the comprehension of the theories and critical concepts in question by means of close readings and in-depth discussion. Difficulties and questions regarding the theoretical texts can be addressed and revisited according to students' needs. Hence participating in the tutorial will also be helpful as a preparation for the final exam in the Critical Theory class.

Further material will be provided on Stud.IP.

Details about the organization of this tutorial will be announced in the first session.

Please register on Stud.IP between 01 September and 31 October. All news concerning this class will be posted on Stud.IP as well. The class will start in the first week of the semester.

M.EP.01c.Mp: Anglophone Literatur and Culture: Theoretical Foundations

Kommentar

This course will begin on 9 November 2017.

This course is designed to introduce students to various literary and cultural theories. It enables them to use theoretical concepts for their close readings of literary texts. Students are expected to study the assigned texts in depth and detail, to contribute to class discussion regularly and substantially, to do independent research, and to complete the course assignments. The module consists of a lecture, this course, tutorials, and self-study units. Students are expected to prepare a portfolio (of about 5000 words) in which they chart and critically reflect on what they have learnt in the courses; they are also required to demonstrate that they can use literary and cultural theories appropriately.

We will use Mary Shelley's Frankenstein (Ed. J. Paul Hunter, Second Norton Critical Edition) (ISBN-10: 0393927938). You are expected to have read the complete novel by October 31, 2017. Regular attendance is required. You may not miss more than two sessions.

Kommentar	The debate about unacceptability in the meaning component of grammar has come to the center of linguistic theorizing in the last two decades or so. We ask whether such unacceptability is always the result of uninterpretability of linguistic structure or whether the meaning component can assign unacceptability to constructions that are perfectly interpretable as suggested by theories making use of the notion of triviality. On the empirical side, we discuss weak islands, intervention effects, anaphoric inaccessibility, redundancy, polarity items, interrogative embedding, comparative constructions, exceptive constructions, modified numerals, implicated presuppositions etc. On the theoretical side, this entails an overview of many advanced topics in semantics and pragmatics, such as degree-semantics, question semantics, dynamic and situation semantics, exhaustivity and implicatures, and presuppositions.

Kommentar The goal of this course is to provide an overview over the main issues concerning case assignment in the languages of the world from both a descriptive typological and a theoretical syntactic perspective. We will first consider different types of case (structural, inherent, default, etc.) as well as different types of case alignment (nominative-accusative, ergative-absolutive, tripartite, etc.), and will then proceed to discussing the major theories of case assignment, namely the configurational theory of case and the dependent case theory. Finally, if time permits, we will also discuss some theories of the morphosyntax of case.

Kommentar As humans, we have remarkable linguistic abilities: we are able to understand an unlimited number of sentences, including sentences that we haven't heard before. The knowledge that allows us to accomplish this incredible feat is largely unconscious. In this class, we will aim to uncover this knowledge by formulating and testing hypotheses about the interpretation of sentences and their parts. At different points in the class, we may make connections with related fields, like language acquisition. This class will suit you if you are interested in linguistic meaning, are keen on analytical thinking and enjoy theory-building. Regular class participation and class homework are required.

This survey lecture offers an advanced survey over all fields in linguistics, the phenomena about language that we want to understand, and proposals on how grammar and meaning interact in our minds. We are open to requests to revisit specific parts of linguistic theory which you may need in order to write your term paper in your Master Seminar.

The lecture contains two units: one on morphosyntax, and one on semantics and pragmatics. You can attend one of these two units, or take the full class — a detailed program of times and topics will be presented in the first session(s) of winter term.

Kommentar	The historical development of the English language, from a variety of formerly continental Germanic dialects, over a pan-European pidgin to a global lingua franca of World Englishes encompasses numerous internal and external factors. This lecture offers a basic introduction to the main phonological, morphological, lexicological and syntactic changes of English between 650 and 1700 AD and also searches for triggers and an arguable teleology of language change. The lecture course is intended as a useful companion to a series of modules taught during this semester.

Kommentar	The English lyric of the Later Middle Ages exhibits a fascinating variety of topics, formal experiments and generic syncretism. New or concurring concepts of love, divine will, nature, sin or social unrest find their expression in an intriguing spectrum of songs, be they long or short, plain or pompous in style. The course aims to offer new insights into the innovations of this particular genre, while paying special attention to the multilingualism of the time and the political and material contexts of English lyrics, as far as they can be reconstructed. Participants should obtain a copy of Luria, Maxwell S. and Richard L. Hoffman, eds. Middle English Lyrics . (New York: 1974) and read a good range of lyrics from this edition before the beginning of the course.

Kommentar	From an epistemological point of view, literary riddles pose a paradox, because they seem to recapitulate answers that are apparently already known. Their value for the medieval classroom and their versatility for teaching logical as well as alogical thinking in the trivial disciplines has long been underestimated. The Anglo-Latin and Old English riddle tradition represents the most important and most comprehensive literature of this kind in early medieval Europe and offers a fascinating range of semiotic, semantic, syntactic, and paronomastic fuzziness that fundamentally questions blunt formalistic attitudes to language as code without context. The course offers an introduction to the literary, semantic and gryphic specifics of Anglo-Saxon riddles and aims to teach the medieval principles of semiotics and literary exegesis as a wider gateway to the riddle of poetry in general. Texts will be provided.

Kommentar	The English lyric of the Later Middle Ages exhibits a fascinating variety of topics, formal experiments and generic syncretism. New or concurring concepts of love, divine will, nature, sin or social unrest find their expression in an intriguing spectrum of songs, be they long or short, plain or pompous in style. The course aims to offer new insights into the innovations of this particular genre, while paying special attention to the multilingualism of the time and the political and material contexts of English lyrics, as far as they can be reconstructed. Participants should obtain a copy of Luria, Maxwell S. and Richard L. Hoffman, eds. Middle English Lyrics . (New York: 1974) and read a good range of lyrics from this edition before the beginning of the course.

Literary heritage plays an important part for the literature industry. Late authors are often commemorated in literary houses and museums, special editions and readings. This course will focus in its first part on the term "heritage" and will examine what we consider to be heritage. We will discuss how it is linked to history, traditions and identity. We will then look at why literary heritage is important for the cultural life of Britain today. Its most significant features are its obsession with the past and its sudden widespread use—seemingly everywhere—in recent years. We will also focus on literary heritage in Germany, as well as the questions of controversial literary heritage. Readings will be available for download on Stud.IP.

The lecture series will cover both Romantic and Victorian literature. During the 19th century, Britain saw an enormous increase of wealth and power, territorial expansion, technological innovations, industrialisation, scientific progress, political and social reforms. At the same time, it was an age of fundamental crises of faith and norms and political discontent: The impact of the American and French Revolution resonates in many Romantic texts, and later Darwin's theory of evolution and other scientific discoveries called religion into question. Towards the end of the century gender norms were seriously contested and the belief in the empire and the ideology of progress began to erode. The lecture series will attempt at covering these conflicts, tensions, and paradoxes, as they are manifest in poetry, novels, essays, scientific discourses, drama and art.

Readings: It is recommended to purchase the volumes Romanticism by Duncan Wu (Blackwell) and The Victorian Age (Norton Anthology) for poetry and shorter prose pieces. Novels: Joseph Conrad, Heart of Darkness; Charles Dickens, Great Expectations; Charlotte Brontë, Jane Eyre; George Eliot, Middlemarch; Thomas Hardy, Tess of the D'Urbervilles; Mary Shelley: Frankenstein; R.L. Stevenson, The Strange Case of Dr Jekyll and Mr Hyde, Plays: Oscar Wilde, The Importance of Being Earnest.

Background reading: Christopher Harvie and H.C.G. Matthew, Nineteenth-Century Britain: A Very Short Introduction (Oxford 2000) and the chapters on Victorian Novelists in Terry Eagleton, The English Novel (London 2005).

Voraussetzungen

Students interested in taking part in MOOC for credits should have a good idea of how to write a term paper since this will not be part of the course, but will be expected by way of exam.

Kommentar

Are you interested in looking beyond the University's horizon? Are you good at timing and staggering yourself? Then a MOOC may be just the thing for you.

FutureLearn.com is an online course portal hosting MOOCs, Massive Open Online Courses, produced and maintained by major international (mostly British) universities. Among FutureLearn's partner universities are the Universities of Glasgow and Edinburgh, Exeter University and Sheffield University, King's College and Royal Holloway, London, and the University of East Anglia; but also the Australian Monash University and the University of Cape Town, to name but a few.

MOOCs are not taught like our courses are, with regular 90 mins meetings over the semester, but tend to be shorter, with running times between 4 and 6 weeks. They expect you to put in about 3 hours of work per week, and they consist of online materials to work with and to work through, taking part in online discussions and (usually) short quizzes.

If you are interested in taking part in a MOOC and in getting credits for it, sign up through StudIP. You will get updates on available courses on FutureLearn. To gain credits, you will have to take part in two MOOCs.

This course can be used in fulfilment of modules M.EP.04a and M.EP.10d (term-paper modules).

This course is NOT suitable for exchange students. It is also NOT suitable for first-semester students (but fear not, it will be offered again!).

Kommentar In his famous study Orientalism (1978), Edward Said claims that literary and colonial discourses merge in Western representations of the Orient. This class will focus on how representations of the Orient in Romantic literature sometimes follow a political agenda in shifting between idealisation, "othering," and vilification of the East. Sir William Jones's translation of the Sanskrit drama Sacontalá manifests a scholarly and popular interest in Indian cultural heritage, while Samuel Taylor Coleridge offers an opium-induced poetic vision of ancient China in "Kubla Khan." Turkey, in turn, is represented in Lord Byron's verse tales The Giaour and The Corsair as well as in Percy Bysshe Shelley's lyrical drama Hellas. Based on Said's criticism, we will analyse Orientalist elements in these works, but we will also consider problems of Said's generalising approach by looking at the authors' deviations from Orientalist discourse.

Required Reading (to be read before the beginning of the term): William Jones, The Sacontalá: or, The Fatal Ring (1789); Samuel Taylor Coleridge, "Kubla Khan: or, A Vision in a Dream: A Fragment" (1797); Lord Byron, The Giaour: A Fragment of a Turkish Tale (1813) and The Corsair (1814); Percy Bysshe Shelley, Hellas (1822); Chapter 1 of Edward Said, Orientalism (1789).

Literacy traditionally refers to the ability to read and write language; visual literacy expands the term to include the ability to knowledgeably and critically read any kinds of visual signs, such as images. In this course, in order to train our visual literacy skills, we will take Australian Visual Arts as our case study. We will discuss a wide range of visual media - among them contemporary Indigenous Australian painting, film (cinema, mockumentary, commercial), comic and public sculpture - which we will train to analyse with the appropriate tools, while putting a particular emphasis on the relation between visual media and national and cultural identities.

Kommentar	In the days when movie pictures were still in their infancy, Charles Dickens and H. G. Wells anticipated in their novels subsequent major cinematic techniques, for example the rendering of parallel action, the innovative use of visual perspective such as the play with changing "camera" angles and distances, or the use of dramatic contrasts between light and dark. We will analyse how these two Victorian authors use these and other quasi-cinematic effects in their writings, and we will discuss how film adaptations from different periods of movie making implement the texts' visual imagery. Furthermore, we will look at video games inspired by the images of both the novels and their film adaptations, which we will practice to analyse with the appropriate tools. In a creativity session, we will develop and visually express our own ideas for a multimedia adaptation for one of the two novels.

Kommentar	The development of the English Novel in the nineteenth century was for a great part shaped by women writers in terms of style, contents and form. Looking at works by four canonical British women writers who have all explored the precarious social position of women of their time but have found very different ways of telling a story, this course will explore what Terry Eagleton has called "the most hybrid of literary forms". With the exception of Middlemarch, we will, however, not read the most famous of their novels - no Pride & Prejudice, no Jane Eyre - but those novels which often undeservedly remain in the shadows of the more popular works. In order to set the ground for informed discussions, it is obligatory to read all novels before term starts. Reading: Jane Austen, Sense and Sensibility (Norton Critical Edition); Anne Brontë, Agnes Grey (Penguin Classics); Charlotte Brontë, Villette (Penguin Classics); George Eliot, Middlemarch (Norton Critical Edition). Registration: via StudIP until 7. Kommentar	Virtual Canadian Studies (VCS) is a course programme offered by the Gesellschaft für Kanada-Studien e.V. The courses are not taught face-to-face in a classroom at Göttingen University, but are held by way of a virtual classroom and chat sessions. The format is very different and takes some time to get used to, but it offers students the chance of communicating differently (and on a greater scope) than many in-class meetings do. The Anglophone Literature division is happy to import these courses, both to round off the topics and themes that we cover ourselves and to give students the chance to experience a different sort of teaching mode. Note that this course is NOT available on StudIP. If you wish to transfer your grade after having completed the course, please contact Dr. Reitemeier.

This course is an extension of the class offered during the SS 2017, however, no previous knowledge is required. We will focus on issues such as life writing and Ground Zero Fiction, the historization of 9/11, and the September 11 attacks as perceived by the younger generation of authors, while keeping in mind aspects previously seen - trauma and grief, commemoration and memorials, borders and surveillance. Our corpus will again include American novels, Francophone and Anglophone Canadian novels, but in a transatlantic perspective, it will also pay a special attention to French and British novels dealing with the same agenda, among others: Frédéric Beigbeder's Windows on the World, Salim Bachi's Tuez-les tous, and Ian McEwan's Saturday.

Note: As in the SS 2017, all sessions will be held in English, but the students can choose to write the assignments as well as their final paper in English or French.

The course will start on November 7, 2017. The registration deadline is November 3, 2017.

Instructor/Enseignante: Diane Bélisle-Wolf, Mainz (dbelisle-wolf@web.de)

Course requirements:

- critical reading of the texts provided by the lecturer

Kommentar This class sets out to trace the captivating and variegated movement known as the "Harlem Renaissance," which is generally regarded as the first full-scale surge in cultural and artistic self-representation and activity by African Americans. Taking its origin in Harlem in the early 1920s, but spreading into other urban centers of the United States in the course of the ensuing decade, this movement - known as the "New Negro Movement" at the time - brought to fame a variety of writers, artists, and philosophers who sought to define, promote and change African American culture and literature.

In this class we will be concerned with a selection of the fiction, poetry, and political essays produced in the Harlem Renaissance - against the backdrop of politico-cultural developments (segregation, anti-black violence) as well as literary and artistic trends (modernism, Primitivism) of the time. In this context, we will consider representations of gender and sexuality, the tensions between the rural South and the urban North, and the co-existence of celebrations of common black folk culture and bohemian, avant-garde performance sitting at the heart of the movement.

Class readings (such as excerpts, short stories, selected poetry, and essays) will be provided in a reader at the beginning of the semester; but you need to purchase the four - short - novels which we will read in full length. These are Nella Larsen's Quicksand (Dover), Zora Neale Hurston's Their Eyes Were Watching God (Virago Modern Classics), Langston Hughes's Not Without Laughter (Dover), and Claude McKay's Home to Harlem (Northeastern UP).

Further secondary literature will be made available on the reserve shelf in the library.

Registration: Attendance for this class is limited to 30 students. Binding (!) registration on Stud.IP between 01 September and 01 October 2017 is required. All news concerning this class will be posted on Stud.IP as well. The class will start in the first week of the semester. For final registration, participants need to attend the first session of class.

Kommentar	In this course we will study various forms of creative nonfiction: essays, memoirs, biographical pieces, journalism, nature and travel writing. We will analyze and compare the variety of voices, styles, poetic and fictional techniques used in this range of genres. Thematically, the selection of texts will focus on the experiences of pain and adversity, both as a personal experience and moments of cultural and political unrest. As readers, we explore how nonfictional narratives that appropriate fictional storytelling techniques change our reception and understanding of stories and events. Thematically, we will particularly focus on questions of racial and sexual identity, social and political struggle, the experience of loss and illness, rivalry and friendship, urban and alternative life styles. Texts to be read range from early twentieth-century essays by Randolph Bourne, William James, and Gertrude Stein, to the New Journalism of the 1960s and 70s, especially the work of Joan Didion and Joe Eszterhas. The experience of growing up black in the Americas, racial struggle, and the negotiation of ethnic and cultural identities will be studied in the writings of James Baldwin, and the recent film I'm Not Your Negro (2016) based on Baldwin's work. We will also read Ta-Nehisi Coates's Between the World and Me (2015), and essays by Edwidge Danticat, Jonathan Franzen, Vivian Gornick, Mark Greif, Mary Oliver, and Colson Whitehead. Lyrical forms of nonfiction to be discussed include authors such as Elisa- beth Bishop, Robert Pinsky, and Claudia Rankine's Citizen: An American Lyric (2014). Mary Cappello's "Wending Artifice: Creative Nonfiction" (2014) will serve us as a critical approach for framing the topic of the course.

The final selection of works that we will read will be provided with the syllabus at the beginning of the term.

Please acquire a copy and read in advance:

Claudia Rankine, Citizen: An American Lyric (2014)

Te-Nahesi Coates, Between the World and Me (2015)

Kommentar This course will consider some of the classic authors of the American Renaissance: Emerson, Thoreau, Fuller, Hawthorne, Melville, Whitman, Dickinson, and Douglass. The emphasis will be on Emerson as the thinker that other writers had to come to terms with. His insistence that each individual has the ability, even the moral obligation, to define his own relation to nature will be the prism through which we consider Thoreau's retreat to Walden Pond, Fuller's vindication of the rights of women, Hawthorne's investigation of personal guilt, Melville's encyclopedic depiction of whale hunting, Whitman's expansive democratic poetics, Dickinson's intense introspection, and Douglass' struggle for personal freedom and the abolition of slavery. This course will require a lot of reading, but it will provide students with a firm foothold in the first body of literature to define itself as self-consciously American.

Required reading:

Ralph Waldo Emerson, "American Scholar" (1837), "Self-Reliance" (1841), "Experience" (1844). Provided.

Henry David Thoreau, Walden Pond (1854). Please buy the Princeton UP edition.

Margaret Fuller, "The Great Lawsuit. Man versus Men. Woman versus Women" (1843). Provided.

Nathaniel Hawthorne, The Scarlet Letter (1850). Please buy the Norton Critical Edition edited by Person.

Herman Melville, Moby-Dick (1851). Please buy the Norton Critical Edition edited by Parker and Hayford.

What Whitman and Emily Dickinson, selected poems. Provided.

Frederick Douglass, Narrative of the Life of Frederick Douglass (1845). Please buy Norton Critical Edition edited by Andrews and McFeely.

Kommentar

The debate about unacceptability in the meaning component of grammar has come to the center of linguistic theorizing in the last two decades or so. We ask whether such unacceptability is always the result of uninterpretability of linguistic structure or whether the meaning component can assign unacceptability to constructions that are perfectly interpretable as suggested by theories making use of the notion of triviality. On the empirical side, we discuss weak islands, intervention effects, anaphoric inaccessibility, redundancy, polarity items, interrogative embedding, comparative constructions, exceptive constructions, modified numerals, implicated presuppositions etc. On the theoretical side, this entails an overview of many advanced topics in semantics and pragmatics, such as degree-semantics, question semantics, dynamic and situation semantics, exhaustivity and implicatures, and presuppositions.

Kommentar	The goal of this course is to provide an overview over the main issues concerning case assignment in the languages of the world from both a descriptive typological and a theoretical syntactic perspective. We will first consider different types of case (structural, inherent, default, etc.) as well as different types of case alignment (nominative-accusative, ergative-absolutive, tripartite, etc.), and will then proceed to discussing the major theories of case assignment, namely the configurational theory of case and the dependent case theory. Finally, if time permits, we will also discuss some theories of the morphosyntax of case.

Kommentar	The English lyric of the Later Middle Ages exhibits a fascinating variety of topics, formal experiments and generic syncretism. New or concurring concepts of love, divine will, nature, sin or social unrest find their expression in an intriguing spectrum of songs, be they long or short, plain or pompous in style. The course aims to offer new insights into the innovations of this particular genre, while paying special attention to the multilingualism of the time and the political and material contexts of English lyrics, as far as they can be reconstructed. Participants should obtain a copy of Luria, Maxwell S. and Richard L. Hoffman, eds. Middle English Lyrics . (New York: 1974) and read a good range of lyrics from this edition before the beginning of the course.

Kommentar	From an epistemological point of view, literary riddles pose a paradox, because they seem to recapitulate answers that are apparently already known. Their value for the medieval classroom and their versatility for teaching logical as well as analogical thinking in the trivial disciplines has long been underestimated. The Anglo-Latin and Old English riddle tradition represents the most important and most comprehensive literature of this kind in early medieval Europe and offers a fascinating range of semiotic, semantic, syntactic, and paronomastic fuzziness that fundamentally questions blunt formalistic attitudes to language as code without context. The course offers an introduction to the literary, semantic and graphic specifics of Anglo-Saxon riddles and aims to teach the medieval principles of semiotics and literary exegesis as a wider gateway to the riddle of poetry in general. Texts will be provided.

Kommentar	The colloquium invites advanced students who are preparing or already working on their B.A. or M.A. thesis. It will provide the opportunity to present and discuss your work in progress and receive valuable feedback. Further sessions will be on academic writing, research, and current developments in American cultural and literary studies as well as critical theory. The course also gives students the opportunity to suggest specific topics and/or theoretical texts relevant to the field of American Studies and with regard to current research projects that may be taken up in individual class discussions. If you have a particular topic or text in mind that you want to propose for discussion, please send an email to Prof. Tischleder before the beginning of the semester.
	If you wish to take this colloquium as part of your "fachwissenschaftliche Vertiefung" (B.AS.09; B.AS.501) or as part of your "Master-Abschlussmodul" (M.AS.04 or M.EP.6b), please come to the instructor's office hours well in advance.
	Students who wish to take this class as part of module M.EP.09b and who need to write a 'Forschungsbericht' as a 'Prüfungsleistung' in this module, too, are asked to contact Prof. Tischleder before the beginning of the semester.
	Please also note that we also recommend to take this colloquium as a voluntary component of module B.EP.51, i.e., before you prepare your B.A. thesis in North American Studies. While you will not be given credit for the colloquium in the context of this module, participation is still highly recommended.

Registration: Binding (!) registration on Stud.IP between 01 September and 01 October 2017 is required. All news concerning this class will be posted on Stud.IP. The class will start in the first week of the semester. For final registration, participants need to attend the first session of class.

Kommentar

The colloquium is designed to help BA- and MA-level students who are in the process of writing—or thinking about—the theses (BA-Arbeit/MA-Arbeit) necessary for the completion of their degrees. Students will have the opportunity to present their work-in-progress to their peers. Many sessions will be devoted to discussing student work. Other sessions will deal with topics in academic research and writing. We will also discuss current trends and methods in American studies and in critical theory. Students are invited to propose their own topics and texts for general discussion. Please get your suggestions to me as soon as possible so I can try to include them in the syllabus.

If you wish to take this colloquium as part of your "fachwissenschaftliche Vertiefung" (B.AS.09; B.AS.501) or as part of your "Master-Abschlussmodul" (M.AS.04 or M.EP.6b), please come to the instructor's office hours well in advance.

Students who wish to take this class as part of module M.EP.09b and who need to write a 'Forschungsbericht' as a 'Prüfungsleistung' in this module, too, are asked to contact Prof. Tischleder before the beginning of the semester.

Please also note that we recommend to take this colloquium as a voluntary component of module B.EP.51, i.e., before you prepare your B.A. thesis in North American Studies. While you will not be given credit for the colloquium in the context of this module, participation is still highly recommended.

Registration: Binding (!) registration on Stud.IP between 01 September and 01 October 2017 is required. All news concerning this class will be posted on Stud.IP. The class will start in the first week of the semester. For final registration, participants need to attend the first session of class.

The debate about unacceptability in the meaning component of grammar has come to the center of linguistic theorizing in the last two decades or so. We ask whether such unacceptability is always the result of uninterpretability of linguistic structure or whether the meaning component can assign unacceptability to constructions that are perfectly interpretable as suggested by theories making use of the notion of triviality. On the empirical side, we discuss weak islands, intervention effects, anaphoric inaccessibility, redundancy, polarity items, interrogative embedding, comparative constructions, exceptive constructions, modified numerals, implicated presuppositions etc. On the theoretical side, this entails an overview of many advanced topics in semantics and pragmatics, such as degree-semantics, question semantics, dynamic and situation semantics, exhaustivity and implicatures, and presuppositions.

Kommentar	The goal of this course is to provide an overview over the main issues concerning case assignment in the languages of the world from both a descriptive typological and a theoretical syntactic perspective. We will first consider different types of case (structural, inherent, default, etc.) as well as different types of case alignment (nominative-accusative, ergative-absolutive, tripartite, etc.), and will then proceed to discussing the major theories of case assignment, namely the configurational theory of case and the dependent case theory. Finally, if time permits, we will also discuss some theories of the morphosyntax of case.

Kommentar	This course is about the development of syntax (mainly questions and negation) in first and second language acquisition in terms of a recent syntactic theory: The Minimalist Program introduced a new concept of language and added new content to the innateness position concerning linguistic competence. One aspect of Minimalism is the consideration of the language faculty in a broader cognitive and perceptual system, which marks a shift from the earlier generative assumptions that attribute the totality of linguistic properties to Universal Grammar (rich UG) to a more simple and economic conception of Universal Grammar (poor UG). Another aspect is the feature based representation of language competence which we will apply to data from acquisition and learning.

Knowing what's possible, do we also know what's impossible? The data seem to speak against an anything goes system. Take for instance movement or internal Merge in more current terms:

Has the man who met Bruce recently will play the guitar?*

Will the man who has met Bruce recently play the guitar?

How do you wonder who fixed the car ?*

How do you think that he fixed the car ?

Putting restrictions on systems makes them complex, removing them simplifies systems.

The task of syntax is to build larger object from smaller ones. So, what are the limits of the possible if there are any? How do we capture restrictions? Do we have to assume that structure-building processes are constrained? What is the proper place of restrictions?

In this course we will see how structure-building has been implemented and what changes and simplifications have been approached over the years?

We will also address current debates and discuss the status of restrictions from a minimalist perspective. Basically, there are 4 different logical options: (1) constraints may apply in the syntax (2) they may work at the semantic and phonological interfaces (3) they can follow from the architecture of the linguistic system (4) or constraints may be conceived of as a consequence of non-linguistic principles applying to any system. We will clarify what (1) - (4) mean in a minimalist syntax together in class.

Students with unconstrained interest in linguistics should feel free to join us in class! Everybody is welcome without any restrictions!

Kommentar	Word classes are essential for any grammatical description, although it is not entirely clear what their nature is. Word classes can be considered as abstractions over sets of words displaying common properties. In this course we will be looking at a number of approaches to word classes, asking in particular how we can define them, and whether they have sharp boundaries. Another focus of the course refers to the recent claim that roots are not specified for category, and receive category by being merged with specific functional projections. What are the consequences of this claim for affixes selecting a specific category of the base?

Kommentar	From an epistemological point of view, literary riddles pose a paradox, because they seem to recapitulate answers that are apparently already known. Their value for the medieval classroom and their versatility for teaching logical as well as analogical thinking in the trivial disciplines has long been underestimated. The Anglo-Latin and Old English riddle tradition represents the most important and most comprehensive literature of this kind in early medieval Europe and offers a fascinating range of semiotic, semantic, syntactic, and paronomastic fuzziness that fundamentally questions blunt formalistic attitudes to language as code without context. The course offers an introduction to the literary, semantic and graphic specifics of Anglo-Saxon riddles and aims to teach the medieval principles of semiotics and literary exegesis as a wider gateway to the riddle of poetry in general. Texts will be provided.

Kommentar	The archive at the Biblioteca Capitolare in Vercelli, Italy, offers unique insight into the creation, collection, exchange, and use of medieval manuscripts. With manuscripts dating from the fourth century to the sixteenth, the archive is an excellent resource for students of medieval material culture. This course will prepare students to participate in the one-week Praxismodul, "The Vercelli School of Medieval European Palaeography" in Vercelli, Italy, taking place in March 2018 (for more information, see link below). In addition to furthering their abilities to read medieval English, students will undergo training in palaeography and transcription, and learn about the types of books that were read and produced in a medieval monastery. The assessment will include a research paper, a transcription of a medieval text, and a report on the field trip. Students who sign up for this Hauptseminar must also register for the Forschungsexkursionseminar and complete the assessment in order to receive full credits.

You will receive an introduction to the study of original medieval manuscripts, their description, dating, transcription, conservation and exhibition. The trip further includes visits to an academic publisher and a range of historical sites relevant to Medieval English Studies. We invite you to present your experience and impressions in the form of videos, blogs, photographic exhibitions and reports. This year's fieldtrip will lead us to Vercelli (Italy) where we have access to manuscripts from c. 350-1550 AD. At least 70% of student funding has been secured for this trip. N.B.: You must be a student enrolled in M.EP.11 to take this trip. Prerequisite to M.EP.11 is the successful completion of both M.EP.02(b) and M.EP.05.

Kommentar Literary heritage plays an important part for the literature industry. Late authors are often commemorated in literary houses and museums, special editions and readings. This course will focus in its first part on the term "heritage" and will examine what we consider to be heritage. We will discuss how it is linked to history, traditions and identity. We will then look at why literary heritage is important for the cultural life of Britain today. Its most significant features are its obsession with the past and its sudden widespread use—seemingly everywhere—in recent years. We will also focus on literary heritage in Germany, as well as the questions of controversial literary heritage. Readings will be available for download on Stud.IP.

Kommentar

This course is for all three modules. It is obligatory for Module 12 a: students who wish to familiarize themselves with literary events within the framework of Module M.EP.12a. We will look at the literature industry and the various events which it offers.

It is also obligatory for Module 12 b: the colloquium is also meant for students who will be doing an internship in Germany or Britain (Modules M.EP. 12b). It aims to help students prepare for their placements across the literature industry and gives them guidance for their required work.

The course is elective for Module 12 c: students who wish to do a placement within the framework of module 12 c may take this course to help prepare for their placements and to gain a deeper insight into the literature industry. Students taking it as an elective do not receive credit.

The course syllabus will be tailored to the specific needs of the participants. Kommentar This class sets out to trace the captivating and variegated movement known as the "Harlem Renaissance," which is generally regarded as the first full-scale surge in cultural and artistic self-representation and activity by African Americans. Taking its origin in Harlem in the early 1920s, but spreading into other urban centers of the United States in the course of the ensuing decade, this movement - known as the "New Negro Movement" at the time - brought to fame a variety of writers, artists, and philosophers who sought to define, promote and change African American culture and literature.

In this class we will be concerned with a selection of the fiction, poetry, and political essays produced in the Harlem Renaissance - against the backdrop of politico-cultural developments (segregation, anti-black violence) as well as literary and artistic trends (modernism, Primitivism) of the time. In this context, we will consider representations of gender and sexuality, the tensions between the rural South and the urban North, and the co-existence of celebrations of common black folk culture and bohemian, avant-garde performance sitting at the heart of the movement.

Class readings (such as excerpts, short stories, selected poetry, and essays) will be provided in a reader at the beginning of the semester; but you need to purchase the four - short - novels which we will read in full length. These are Nella Larsen's Quicksand (Dover), Zora Neale Hurston's Their Eyes Were Watching God (Virago Modern Classics), Langston Hughes's Not Without Laughter (Dover), and Claude McKay's Home to Harlem (Northeastern UP).

Further secondary literature will be made available on the reserve shelf in the library.

Registration: Attendance for this class is limited to 30 students. Binding (!) registration on Stud.IP between 01 September and 01 October 2017 is required. All news concerning this class will be posted on Stud.IP as well. The class will start in the first week of the semester. For final registration, participants need to attend the first session of class.

Kommentar In this course we will study various forms of creative nonfiction: essays, memoirs, biographical pieces, journalism, nature and travel writing. We will analyze and compare the variety of voices, styles, poetic and fictional techniques used in this range of genres. Thematically, the selection of texts will focus on the experiences of pain and adversity, both as a personal experience and moments of cultural and political unrest. As readers, we explore how nonfictional narratives that appropriate fictional storytelling techniques change our reception and understanding of stories and events. Thematically, we will particularly focus on questions of racial and sexual identity, social and political struggle, the experience of loss and illness, rivalry and friendship, urban and alternative life styles.

Texts to be read range from early twentieth-century essays by Randolph Bourne, William James, and Gertrude Stein, to the New Journalism of the 1960s and 70s, especially the work of Joan Didion and Joe Eszterhas. The experience of growing up black in the Americas, racial struggle, and the negotiation of ethnic and cultural identities will be studied in the writings of James Baldwin, and the recent film I'm Not Your Negro (2016) based on Baldwin's work.

We will also read Ta-Nehisi Coates's Between the World and Me (2015), and essays by Edwidge Danticat, Jonathan Franzen, Vivian Gornick, Mark Greif, Mary Oliver, and Colson Whitehead. Lyrical forms of nonfiction to be discussed include authors such as Elisabeth Bishop, Robert Pinsky, and Claudia Rankine's Citizen: An American Lyric (2014). Mary Cappello's "Wending Artifice: Creative Nonfiction" (2014) will serve us as a critical approach for framing the topic of the course.

The final selection of works that we will read will be provided with the syllabus at the beginning of the term.

Please acquire a copy and read in advance:

Claudia Rankine, Citizen: An American Lyric (2014)

Te-Nahe Coates, Between the World and Me (2015)

M.EP.06b.Mp: Nordamerikastudien - Abschlussmodul

Kommentar

This course will consider some of the classic authors of the American Renaissance: Emerson, Thoreau, Fuller, Hawthorne, Melville, Whitman, Dickinson, and Douglass. The emphasis will be on Emerson as the thinker that other writers had to come to terms with. His insistence that each individual has the ability, even the moral obligation, to define his own relation to nature will be the prism through which we consider Thoreau's retreat to Walden Pond, Fuller's vindication of the rights of women, Hawthorne's investigation of personal guilt, Melville's encyclopedic depiction of whale hunting, Whitman's expansive democratic poetics, Dickinson's intense introspection, and Douglass' struggle for personal freedom and the abolition of slavery. This course will require a lot of reading, but it will provide students with a firm foothold in the first body of literature to define itself as self-consciously American.

Required reading:

Ralph Waldo Emerson, "American Scholar" (1837), "Self-Reliance" (1841), "Experience" (1844). Provided.

Henry David Thoreau, Walden Pond (1854). Please buy the Princeton UP edition.

Margaret Fuller, "The Great Lawsuit. Man versus Men. Woman versus Women" (1843). Provided.

Nathaniel Hawthorne, The Scarlet Letter (1850). Please buy the Norton Critical Edition edited by Person.

Herman Melville, Moby-Dick (1851). Please buy the Norton Critical Edition edited by Parker and Hayford.

What Whitman and Emily Dickinson, selected poems. Provided.

Frederick Douglass, Narrative of the Life of Frederick Douglass (1845). Please buy Norton Critical Edition edited by Andrews and McFeely.

Registration: Attendance for this class is limited to 30 students. Binding (!) registration on Stud.IP between 01 September and 01 October 2017 is required. All news concerning this class will be posted on Stud.IP as well. The class will start in the first week of the semester. For final registration, participants need to attend the first session of class.

Independent Study: Please note that this class also has independent study components (as part of modules B.AS.08; B.AS.09; B.AS.401; B.AS.402; B.EP.51; M.EP.04b; M.EP.09b; M.AS.02)

Kommentar

The colloquium invites advanced students who are preparing or already working on their B.A. or M.A. thesis. It will provide the opportunity to present and discuss your work in progress and receive valuable feedback. Further sessions will be on academic writing, research, and current developments in American cultural and literary studies as well as critical theory.

The course also gives students the opportunity to suggest specific topics and/or theoretical texts relevant to the field of American Studies and with regard to current research projects that may be taken up in individual class discussions. If you have a particular topic or text in mind that you want to propose for discussion, please send an email to Prof. Tischleder before the beginning of the semester.

If you wish to take this colloquium as part of your "fachwissenschaftliche Vertiefung" (B.AS.09; B.AS.501) or as part of your "Master-Abschlussmodul" (M.AS.04 or M.EP.6b), please come to the instructor's office hours well in advance.

Students who wish to take this class as part of module M.EP.09b and who need to write a 'Forschungsbericht' as a 'Prüfungsleistung' in this module, too, are asked to contact Prof. Tischleder before the beginning of the semester.

Please also note that we also recommend to take this colloquium as a voluntary component of module B.EP.51, i.e., before you prepare your B.A. thesis in North American Studies. While you will not be given credit for the colloquium in the context of this module, participation is still highly recommended.

Registration: Binding (!) registration on Stud.IP between 01 September and 01 October 2017 is required. All news concerning this class will be posted on Stud.IP. The class will start in the first week of the semester. For final registration, participants need to attend the first session of class.

The colloquium is designed to help BA- and MA-level students who are in the process of writing—or thinking about—the theses (BA-Arbeit/MA-Arbeit) necessary for the completion of their degrees. Students will have the opportunity to present their work-in-progress to their peers. Many sessions will be devoted to discussing student work. Other sessions will deal with topics in academic research and writing. We will also discuss current trends and methods in American studies and in critical theory. Students are invited to propose their own topics and texts for general discussion. Please get your suggestions to me as soon as possible so I can try to include them in the syllabus.

If you wish to take this colloquium as part of your "fachwissenschaftliche Vertiefung" (B.AS.09; B.AS.501) or as part of your "Master-Abschlussmodul" (M.AS.04 or M.EP.6b), please come to the instructor's office hours well in advance.

Kommentar	This course is primarily meant for students preparing or writing a Bachelor or Master thesis in linguistics. The idea of the course is twofold. First, you will get help with some formal details. We will for instance address questions such as How can I find a topic in linguistics? , How can I organize my working? How should I structure my paper? We will read and discuss some helpful papers on linguistic theory and methodological issues. Second, you should have a forum where we might discuss papers you are interested in or you can present own ideas. Candidates may give a short talk concerning purpose, structure and first parts of their work to get some feedback from other participants in class in a relaxed atmosphere without any stress.
	According to the examination regulations for the Master program and the Master of Education program students are obliged to attend the colloquium as part of their Abschlussmodul .
	Of course every student interested in the issues mentioned above is invited to attend this class and join us.

Kommentar	From an epistemological point of view, literary riddles pose a paradox, because they seem to recapitulate answers that are apparently already known. Their value for the medieval classroom and their versatility for teaching logical as well as analogical thinking in the trivial disciplines has long been underestimated. The Anglo-Latin and Old English riddle tradition represents the most important and most comprehensive literature of this kind in early medieval Europe and offers a fascinating range of semiotic, semantic, syntactic, and paronomastic fuzziness that fundamentally questions blunt formalistic attitudes to language as code without context. The course offers an introduction to the literary, semantic and graphic specifics of Anglo-Saxon riddles and aims to teach the medieval principles of semiotics and literary exegesis as a wider gateway to the riddle of poetry in general. Texts will be provided.

Kommentar	This is an intermediate (Vertiefung) / advanced course for students who enjoy creative writing in English. You must have the basic module to do this course! Its aim is not to create writing at a professional level to be published, but simply to explore writing in English creatively and to have fun. We will discuss various aspects and forms of creative writing, e.g. haikus, poetry, short stories, play-writing, etc. and you will be expected to hand in some of these as homework and / or as course assignments.

Kommentar	We will attempt to find themes, motifs, and resonances within the tradition of public American rhetoric from colonial times to the present day. From John Winthrop and Jonathan Edwards to Martin Luther King, Jr., and Barack Obama, there have been reiterations of specific ideas regarding what America means and represents in the American mind. What are they? Special attention will be given to Abraham Lincoln and his particular importance within this tradition. We will emphasize the sermons and speeches themselves rather than secondary sources, so that we can attempt to grasp the cadences of American rhetoric within the context of both history and the American language as a whole.

	What We Will Do: We will practice short presentations - including speeches and talks previously prepared at home as well as spontaneous impromptu presentations that will enhance students' communicative flexibility. In addition, active class discussions on topics of interest to students will be an integral element of the tutorial. Conversations will be on a conversational as well as on an academic/scientific level. Practical assignments will play a primary role, but will be complemented with theoretical instruction on the areas we will cover. Course contents will be flexible to address the specific needs of the group.
	The Overall Goals: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • to significantly increase students' confidence when participating actively in class discussions and giving talks in English in front of larger audiences in an academic setting • to address aspects of correct pronunciation, grammar and vocabulary giving students the tools to express themselves in an accurate, precise and clear manner • to learn how to give well-structured presentations which are easy and interesting to follow • to develop the ability to make up clear and logical arguments and thereby acquire a persuasive argumentation style • to expand students' spontaneity, creativity and flexibility in class discussions • to learn how to effectively deal with nervousness and stress
Zielgruppe	The Target Group: This tutorial is aimed at all MA students in their first and second semesters who have had little or no chance of speaking English in their previous degree programs and who therefore have difficulties in particular areas pertaining to oral English. It is also designed for students who want to work on refining their general communication and presentation skills in a professional, but more comfortable atmosphere without the performance pressure they usually encounter in their regular classes.

Kommentar	This course is for students in the MA in English Philology programme only.
	The aim of this course is to assist students with their writing projects during the semester. We will have a look at the different stages of the writing process and practise several formats such as term papers, essays, research proposals and what to avoid in academic writing. Together we will tackle the writer's block and discuss how to avoid plagiarism in your papers as well. The course is especially recommended for international students to get familiar with the requirements of the department. But everyone is welcome of course!
	Please note: At the moment, the course is scheduled bi-weekly, however, there can be changes due to the number of participants (which will be announced and discussed in the first session).

Kommentar	This is an intermediate (Vertiefung) / advanced course for students who enjoy creative writing in English. You must have the basic module to do this course! Its aim is not to create writing at a professional level to be published, but simply to explore writing in English creatively and to have fun. We will discuss various aspects and forms of creative writing, e.g. haikus, poetry, short stories, play-writing, etc. and you will be expected to hand in some of these as homework and / or as course assignments.

Please note: To be able to register for this course as part of M.EP.32, you need to have taken the diagnostic test in either April or October.

The course will start in December and will include two block sessions until the beginning of February.

The colonial rule over India greatly informed British literature of the 19th, 20th and 21st centuries.

These diverse narratives served as an instrument for spreading the colonial interest on India among the British.

In this project-oriented seminar we will process ideas and research results which have been developed in the past two years and turn these into an e-learning format.

Within smaller task force groups, students will be guided in research methods and work with primary, as well as secondary sources in order to prepare these for the e-learning content. Therefore, this course will equip you with knowledge on developing e-learning tasks and questionnaires. Furthermore, the course will train research skills as well as intensive text-based work that will help improve your writing and reading skills.

MOOCs: Massive Open Online Courses

Selbststudieneinheit SWS: 2; Anz. Teiln.: 20

Reitemeier, Frauke

Module	M.EP.10d.Mp: Topics in Anglophone Literature M.EP.04a.Mp: Anglistische Literatur- und Kulturwissenschaft - Aufbaumodul
Voraussetzungen	Students interested in taking part in MOOC for credits should have a good idea of how to write a term paper since this will not be part of the course, but will be expected by way of exam.
Kommentar	Are you interested in looking beyond the University's horizon? Are you good at timing and staggering yourself? Then a MOOC may be just the thing for you.

FutureLearn.com is an online course portal hosting MOOCs, Massive Open Online Courses, produced and maintained by major international (mostly British) universities. Among FutureLearn's partner universities are the Universities of Glasgow and Edinburgh, Exeter University and Sheffield University, King's College and Royal Holloway, London, and the University of East Anglia; but also the Australian Monash University and the University of Cape Town, to name but a few.

MOOCs are not taught like our courses are, with regular 90 mins meetings over the semester, but tend to be shorter, with running times between 4 and 6 weeks. They expect you to put in about 3 hours of work per week, and they consist of online materials to work with and to work through, taking part in online discussions and (usually) short quizzes.

If you are interested in taking part in a MOOC and in getting credits for it, sign up through StudIP. You will get updates on available courses on FutureLearn. To gain credits, you will have to take part in two MOOCs.

This course can be used in fulfilment of modules M.EP.04a and M.EP.10d (term-paper modules).

This course is NOT suitable for exchange students. It is also NOT suitable for first-semester students (but fear not, it will be offered again!).

Kommentar	In his famous study Orientalism (1978), Edward Said claims that literary and colonial discourses merge in Western representations of the Orient. This class will focus on how representations of the Orient in Romantic literature sometimes follow a political agenda in shifting between idealisation, "othering," and vilification of the East. Sir William Jones's translation of the Sanskrit drama Sacontalá manifests a scholarly and popular interest in Indian cultural heritage, while Samuel Taylor Coleridge offers an opium-induced poetic vision of ancient China in "Kubla Khan." Turkey, in turn, is represented in Lord Byron's verse tales The Giaour and The Corsair as well as in Percy Bysshe Shelley's lyrical drama Hellas . Based on Said's criticism, we will analyse Orientalist elements in these works, but we will also consider problems of Said's generalising approach by looking at the authors' deviations from Orientalist discourse.
	Required Reading (to be read before the beginning of the term): William Jones, The Sacontalá: or, The Fatal Ring (1789); Samuel Taylor Coleridge, "Kubla Khan: or, A Vision in a Dream: A Fragment" (1797); Lord Byron, The Giaour: A Fragment of a Turkish Tale (1813) and The Corsair (1814); Percy Bysshe Shelley, Hellas (1822); Chapter 1 of Edward Said, Orientalism (1789).

Kommentar	The development of the English Novel in the nineteenth century was for a great part shaped by women writers in terms of style, contents and form. Looking at works by four canonical British women writers who have all explored the precarious social position of women of their time but have found very different ways of telling a story, this course will explore what Terry Eagleton has called "the most hybrid of literary forms". With the exception of Middlemarch, we will, however, not read the most famous of their novels - no Pride & Prejudice, no Jane Eyre - but those novels which often undeservedly remain in the shadows of the more popular works. In order to set the ground for informed discussions, it is obligatory to read all novels before term starts.

Reading: Jane Austen, Sense and Sensibility (Norton Critical Edition); Anne Brontë, Agnes Grey (Penguin Classics); Charlotte Brontë, Villette (Penguin Classics); George Eliot, Middlemarch (Norton Critical Edition).

Registration: via StudIP until 7. October.

Kommentar	The course will start in December and will include two block sessions until the beginning of February. The colonial rule over India greatly informed British literature of the 19th, 20th and 21st centuries. These diverse narratives served as an instrument for spreading the colonial interest on India among the British. In this project-oriented seminar we will process ideas and research results which have been developed in the past two years and turn these into an e-learning format. Within smaller task force groups, students will be guided in research methods and work with primary, as well as secondary sources in order to prepare these for the e-learning content. Therefore, this course will equip you with knowledge on developing e-learning tasks and questionnaires. Furthermore, the course will train research skills as well as intensive text-based work that will help improve your writing and reading skills. Registration: via StudIP until 15 November

Kommentar	Virtual Canadian Studies (VCS) is a course programme offered by the Gesellschaft für Kanada-Studien e.V. The courses are not taught face-to-face in a classroom at Göttingen University, but are held by way of a virtual classroom and chat sessions. The format is very different and takes some time to get used to, but it offers students the chance of communicating differently (and on a greater scope) than many in-class meetings do. The Anglophone Literature division is happy to import these courses, both to round off the topics and themes that we cover ourselves and to give students the chance to experience a different sort of teaching mode. Note that this course is NOT available on StudIP. If you wish to transfer your grade after having completed the course, please contact Dr. Reitemeier.

This course is an extension of the class offered during the SS 2017, however, no previous knowledge is required. We will focus on issues such as life writing and Ground Zero Fiction, the historization of 9/11, and the September 11 attacks as perceived by the younger generation of authors, while keeping in mind aspects previously seen - trauma and grief, commemoration and memorials, borders and surveillance. Our corpus will again include American novels, Francophone and Anglophone Canadian novels, but in a transatlantic perspective, it will also pay a special attention to French and British novels dealing with the same agenda, among others: Frédéric Beigbeder's Windows on the World, Salim Bachi's Tuez-les tous, and Ian McEwan's Saturday.

Note: As in the SS 2017, all sessions will be held in English, but the students can choose to write the assignments as well as their final paper in English or French.

The course will start on November 7, 2017. The registration deadline is November 3, 2017.
